

Broadcasting financial results for 2006-07

ACMA has released the Broadcasting Financial Results 2006-07, which show that the commercial radio sector reported $1,028.9 million in revenue in 2006-07, with total reported profit of $232.8 million. Commercial television licensees reported $3,966.3 million in revenue, with total reported profit of $654.2 million (noting that approximately half of this amount was attributable to specific income statement adjustments as reported by one network).

The results are based on information supplied by the licensees of 55 commercial television and 271 commercial radio licences operating as at 30 June 2007.

Reported overall expenditure on Australian programs was $790.4 million, compared to reported overall expenditure on overseas programs of $410.8 million.

To maintain the confidentiality of individual licensees, broadcasting financial results are aggregated into relevant groupings—for example, smaller, medium, larger regional and capital city markets—and, in some areas, information that might allow the financial results of individual licensees to be determined is not available.
