

Classification

...continued from previous page

16 years referred to in the Code.

Under section 11 of the Act, literary or artistic merit is one of four criteria which the OFLC takes into consideration in determining whether something is classifiable, i.e. it is not a defence to being refused classification, making the board of the OFLC the arbiter of literary and artistic merit.

To facilitate the exercise of this criteria the OFLC is preparing a draft list of permissible and impermissible fetishes. (The Hansard transcript of the ensuing parliamentary debates would presumably be available from the adult section of the Government Printers Bookshop in an opaque wrapper.)

The draft guidelines have an extensive glossary of terms that will be used to determine whether a book will be refused classification. But in seeking to prescribe in such detail the permissible and forbidden contents and covers of publications, and in stigmatising the dissemination of publications by means of wrappers and stickers, the draft guidelines, if implemented may be in substantial disregard of the legislative obligations under the Act and Code, emphasising only what cannot be seen without due deference to the obligation that "adults should be able to read, hear and see what they want."

Raena Lea-Shannon is a solicitor at Michael Frankel & Co and a member of the Watch on Censorship group

From The Archives

Suburban newspapers

Communications Update's survey shows that four major metropolitan daily publishers - News Corp, Fairfax and United/Media Bond through Community Newspapers - have secured control over 85% of audited suburban newspaper titles and 82% of circulation.

Suburban newspapers are "rivers of gold" for their publishers thanks to the advertising dollar.

Morgan Research surveys show that suburbans have advantages that the more prestigious dailies cannot match.

They reach a wider readership, have a slower disposal rate, most are free, and they are usually delivered directly to the home.

Even people who say they are non-newspaper readers turn out to be avid supporters.

Sydney

Murdoch's Cumberland Newspapers group (based in Parramatta) dominates Sydney claiming a weekly readership of more than two million people.

Warwick Fairfax Jr has managed to hold on to the six Suburban Community Newspaper titles and a 50% share in two innerwest Torch mastheads.

One Fairfax executive says that initially Warwick planned to sell all his suburbans until his advisers discovered their cash flow!

John Bremer Fairfax, former deputy chairman of John Fairfax Ltd, picked up the family share in the third suburban group - Eastern Suburbs Newspapers.

ESN publishes the Western Suburbs Courier, Southern Courier, Bondi Courier and Wentworth Courier in the eastern suburbs.

Brisbane

Murdoch also secured a stranglehold over Brisbane when he acquired the remaining 50% of Quest Community Newspapers from Northern Star last year

Quest faced competition from the Brisbane Express Newspaper group until Rural Press Ltd closed down all but two of the 10 titles in late 1987.

The closure was initiated by John Bremer Fairfax when he took over the family's 48% share in Rural Press.

Melbourne

Murdoch's takeover of the Herald & Weekly Times group delivered a lucrative suburban group of titles.

He has now amalgamated the Leader and Standard papers and the newly acquired Broadglen mastheads under the banner of News Ltd Suburbans.

Warwick Fairfax's Syme Community Newspapers still has a 17% market share which includes one joint publication with News Ltd.

The third major Melbourne suburban publisher (the Times Group) includes three audited Southern Cross titles owned by Peter Isaacson.

Isaacson and CPI Publications jointly own two Times mastheads while CPI is sole owner of the company that publishes the Melbourne Times.

Adelaide

Murdoch's Herald & Weekly Times takeover delivered the Messenger Press which has a monopoly over suburban publishing in Adelaide.

Messenger has moved from its Port Adelaide base to News Ltd headquarters and its old colour printing press has been relocated at Griffin - another outpost of the Murdoch empire.

Perth

Alan Bond is poised to top up his Perth daily newspaper profits with lucrative suburban dollars when his Bell group bid succeeds.

Perth's major suburban publisher is Community Newspapers Ltd which is 49.9% owned by Bell and 50.1% by United Media.

Perth also has three small independent owners publishing a total of seven different mastheads.

Communications Update, Issue 36 July 1988