Serious research appeal

AN APPEAL for serious research covering applied technology in Australia has been made by the Australian Financial Review Information Service (AFRIS).

'We want to acquire the reports, compensate their authors or organisations behind them, and make them available for distribution and sale throughout the world,' says Ken McGregor, information manager of the Australian Financial Review.

Mr. McGregor said AFRIS has signed a major Australian research acquisition agreement with the National Technical Information Service (NTIS).

NTIS is a self-supporting agency of the US Department of Commerce, which already has 1.3 million research reports on all the world's industries available for sale.

AFRIS is a major media information bank out of Sydney with recent diversifications into electronic databases (AFRE on ACI's Ausinet) and overseas reports delivery (NTIS, GPO and OECD).

People or organisations interested in the above should ring or write to Mr. McGregor (Sydney 20944, ext 3052, or AFRIS, Box 506, GPO, Sydney, 2001).
