Who's where

Recent movements in the library and information sector

New sales executive joins divine team divine Information Services, a leading provider of knowledge management solutions, has announced the appointment of Lisa Sharp as sales executive, significantly enhancing the company's ability to service clients in Victoria, South Australia and Tasmania. Lisa joined the company on 22 April, reporting to divine Information Services' sales manager, Heather Crosbie, and managing director, Janette Wright.

Lisa most recently held the role of area manager for Raeco International Pty Ltd in Melbourne, a leading supplier of products for libraries. She also brings her experience from the book publishing and retailing industries. She is joining in time to assist with the rollout of divine Information Services' web interfaces for journal management and procurement, kLibrary and kStore.

'Lisa brings her extensive knowledge of the library and publishing industry to the professional and software services offered by divine and to the newly emerging extended enterprise,' says Janette Wright, managing director, divine Information Services. 'She will be based in Melbourne, enhancing the company's ability to service clients in the library and information services sector in Victoria, South Australia and Tasmania.'

Macquarie University
Maxine Brodie has been appointed as deputy university librarian at Macquarie University. She will start at Macquarie on 29 May 2002.

Maxine is currently director of information technology/strategy and chief information officer at the State Library of NSW. Before going to the State Library she was Associate Librarian (Resources) at UTS. She has been involved in many national committees and working parties in the library and information sector in Australia.

Maxine is also a Macquarie graduate. In September 1997, she completed her MBA in the MGSM and was awarded Allen Knott Scholar Award for Academic Merit; shared the Macquarie University Business Graduates Society Prize for Business Administration and the Graduate Management Association of Australia Prize.

Bond University
Gulcin Cribb has been appointed to the position of director, library services at Bond University. Gulcin was manager, Physical Sciences and Engineering Library Service at the University of Queensland prior to taking up her new appointment at Bond University. Gulcin has extensive experience in the areas of innovation, change management, information literacy, flexible learning, library-faculty-industry partnerships, marketing, multimedia, digitisation and virtual libraries. She was one of the original founders of AVEL (Australasian Virtual Engineering Library). Gulcin has published over thirty articles and presented papers at conferences both in Australia and overseas.

Factiva appoints marketing director for Asia
Factiva, has appointed Australian strategic communications and advertising professional Simone Wheeler marketing director for the Asia Pacific region.

With nine years' experience in the region, Simone will lead Factiva's Asia Pacific marketing team across North and Southeast Asia, including Australia and Japan. A committed brand builder, Wheeler has made a name for herself in the region, most recently as marketing director of the Time Inc publication Asiaweek.

Simone said that her objective is to achieve widespread industry recognition for Factiva's global news and business information services in Asia, while ensuring that the company continues to focus on delivering solutions that meet the needs of the Asian business community.

Based in Hong Kong, Wheeler succeeds Kris Slethaug, who is relocating to the United States to head up Factiva's marketing strategy and pricing.

New library manager for National Capital Authority
Vickie Hingston-Jones has been appointed manager of the National Capital Authority's Library and Information Centre in Canberra. Vickie has come to the Authority from the Parliamentary Library via two years in the United Kingdom, where she was deputy librarian at Henley Management College. She returned to the Parliamentary Library in 2001, but the challenge of managing a special library attracted her to the Authority. Here she will focus on promoting the library as a unique resource for anyone interested in the planning and development of the nation's capital.

Of significant historical value is the collection of original documents and publications dating from the first days of the National Capital Development Commission in 1958 until it was abolished in 1988. A photographic collection holds over 20 000 rare historical photographs along with contemporary images of Canberra. Supporting these collections, the library has substantial holdings in the fields of architecture, landscape architecture, urban development, and environmental planning.

Special Libraries Association elects Hill
Cynthia V Hill is the new president-elect of the Special Libraries Association (SLA). Hill is a manager at SunLibrary, Sun Microsystems, Inc. Palo Alto, California, USA, and serves on the adjunct faculty at the San Jose State University School of Library and Information Science. Hill and the newly elected members of SLA's Board of Directors will be installed on 12 June at SLA's 93rd annual conference in Los Angeles, California. At this time, Bill Fisher, professor at the San Jose State University School of Library and Information Science in San Jose, California, will also be sworn-in as the 83rd president of SLA. Hill will serve as president-elect of SLA until June 2003, when her one-year term as SLA president begins. ∎